has that...it's not a wheelchair, exactly, it's more of a cart. And the pole is attached to the cart. She watches the pole, and then when there's a bite, she informs the person that she's fishing with, and that person helps reel in the fish. Now, Saline has a loving father who lives in my district, Rodney is his name, and he takes his daughter out fishing, but he works full time and Saline is in need of constant care, so there's a rotating series of nurses. Now, the nurses are willing to go fishing with Saline. But, there's not just one of them, there's a number of them, and the law says, if you touch a fishing pole, you have to have a license. Now, Game and Parks does not go out and hassle people who are in wheelchairs fishing. I have this from the game wardens. They say, look, unless there's alcohol, we don't go over checking that stuff out looking to see if somebody has a license. But, the nurses don't want to be breaking the law, and so when Saline wants to go fishing, they say, look, if I touch the pole, I've got to have a license. There's no reason why I'm going to have a license under normal order, normal circumstances. Mr. Moore, if you want to buy me a fishing license, I'll take your daughter fishing. And there are about 12, 15 nurses that would be happy to do that, but he's going to have to buy 12 or 15 fishing licenses to have that happen. Took the problem to Game and Parks. Game and Parks said, look, if this person is severely disabled, they can't handle the fishing pole by themselves, a five dollar fishing license, and the person who is fishing with this person and assists them with casting and reeling in the fish doesn't have to have a license. Now, if they have their own pole, then they're fishing on their own, they've got to have their own license. But if they're there to assist, this will cover the situation. So, a person has to be able to prove that they're severely physically disable. They get a permit, the permit costs five bucks, and it's good for the disabled person and the person who assists them. If the person goes beyond assisting, they get their own fishing license. At the hearing, I introduced letters on behalf of the Advocates for Retarded Citizens, ARC, from the League of Human Dignity, and from the United Cerebral Palsy Foundation here in Nebraska, UCP of Nebraska, Inc. it's called. In addition to those supporters, the Game and Parks Division came in, in support of the bill as well, as did Saline's father, Rodney Moore. The estimate by Game and Parks is that we're talking, probably,
