

March 26, 1984

LB 457

that are burnt out by the time they are 62, and I hear Von Minden object to that, but he should try wrestling with 30 kids in the classroom every day and he might not find it such an exciting job after so many years. Sure you like kids and you like what you are doing, but after so many years, you do get burned out in that job. It is a little different than most of the other things that you people have been involved in. I think you should try teaching a classroom. So the point that Senator Beutler is making as far as the mandatory 70 age is entirely different than what we are talking about now in the 62 voluntary. Again I realize that there may be some points that we have to cut, since we don't have the dollars, but personally this is a bill that I could support and take the dollars away from someplace else and I hope that we do consider the bill as it was introduced. Thank you.

PRESIDENT: Going down the list of names to see if you wish to speak at this time, Senator Morehead.

SENATOR MOREHEAD: Mr. President, colleagues, yes, I would like to address the amendment which Senator Beutler has offered and I stand in opposition to Senator Beutler's amendment for several reasons. First of all this is an option.

PRESIDENT: Senator, just a minute, let's see if we can find some order for you. (GAVEL) Please quiet down your conversations please so we may hear the speaker. Senator Morehead.

SENATOR MOREHEAD: Thank you, Mr. President. Again, colleagues, first of all this is an option. Now I suggest to you that teaching is an inspirational job and it does in fact get into your blood, and if at all and in all possibilities you will probably option to continue doing this because there is a degree of satisfaction to see students go on and progress and to develop their talents, but there is, as Senator Remmers has pointed out, a high degree of stress. Now you try being in that classroom with 25 students seven hours a day and longer and you may be dealing with emotional problems, you may be dealing with

10647