

the next sentence that's written. Then you have (a), (b), (c), (d), and list right down the line everyone of these items that the bill makes unlawful. And that is not unlawful simply because it is in writing? Simply because it is on a chart and pointed to? Communication occurs between and among human beings in many ways. The spoken word is not the only way by which you can transmit ideas. So since those who have offered this bill are so concerned about these so-called hate groups, these extremist groups, I want to close this big loophole. But we know that this bill is designed to give good press to people who are running for office or who will run for office and it is not designed to aim or cripple any so-called hate group because not a word in the bill refers to a military or paramilitary organization. Look at the cover of the bill, which you probably won't do. So much of what I am saying, Senator Labeledz, and inviting the body to do is rhetorical. For an act relating to military organizations, yet nothing in the language offered by Senator Chizek, Senator Hoagland and the recently departed, but for the purpose of this bill not mourned, Senator Beutler, not a word about an organization of any kind is in the bill. But nobody reads this kind of legislation except me. So I am going to try to help these people who are making their assault on the first amendment close a loophole large enough to drive a Mack truck loaded with paramilitary hate groups through. All of the language deals with if a person does this, if any person does that, but not any groups. So the heading of the bill is misleading. But the bill drafter did not do anything incorrect or deliberately draft the bill or the title to mislead. There is language stricken from the old law that did talk about military organizations. But the new language and that which would be left, if this atrocious bill is voted on by this Legislature affirmatively, has nothing to do with any organizations. I am going to read the language of the amendment again. All you have to do is look on page 3 of the green copy and follow it as I read my amendment and see how little change has occurred. And if the language in the green copy is acceptable, that which I am offering is acceptable.
