

it, let us stop being so hard on our young people. If a young girl sells her body for money, don't criticize it. You sell out the state's integrity. You change the laws that don't believe ought to be changed and some of our children are aware of this. If a young man sells dope and he can get money selling it, don't criticize him. He is doing what our practices as a Legislature tell him and them is the thing to do. If enough money is involved, everything should be for sale, everything. And that is not what I believe. If I thought there should be a one-year period of expulsion, that's what I would vote, whether the federal government had anything to do with it or not, and if I believed that a mandatory requirement of expulsion was something that ought not be in place, I will not vote for it. In reading one of the documents that I've had a chance to just glance at because something was underlined, there is verbiage to the effect that the chief officer can make a decision on a case by case basis. Somerody handed me a note and said then elect "Repelicans." Now after seeing the posturing of the "Repelicans" on this so-called first 100 days of nonsense where they gave Rupert Murdoch, the most unseemly, shameless individual, a huge tax break, the "Repelicans" are the last ones I'd vote for for anything, except for sheriff if...

SPEAKER WITHEM: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...I wanted to be a bank robber. Now if I want to be a bank robber, I'd vote for them for sheriff because I can show them the point where this is really entrepreneurship, and they would not bother me if I robbed the bank and did it on a big enough scale. But I hope there are other lights on so I'll have a chance to look at this definition before I proceed. Thank you, Mr. President.

SPEAKER WITHEM: We are at the point, quite frankly, and there are four lights on, and there are about 15 seconds left. We will pass over this bill and go to the next one, LB 874, Mr. Clerk.

CLERK: Senator Maurstad, 874, Senator, I have E & R amendments pending.

SPEAKER WITHEM: Senator Maurstad.

SENATOR MAURSTAD: Mr. Speaker, I'd move to adopt the E & R amendments to LB 874.
