be gone or it won't matter or somebody else will take the blame. Well somebody's going to pay the price, and that somebody is the state of Nebraska. And that's our responsibility, each one of us, 49 of us, each are here representing not only Nebraska today, but Nebraska of the future. And that means we have to think about long term, the impact of these changes. And we can't be promising everything to everybody. We can't do it all. We can't increase the state aid. We can't increase the state budget. And we can't cut the income taxes and cut the property taxes and do it all and have it balance out, not to any significant degree. And there are promises being made and people are being sold that line. And I think that they're being misled because I think the lessons of history tell us it doesn't work in the end, it doesn't balance out. So back in '89 we didn't end up increasing state aid, we only cut the taxes. But we still ended up, as Senator Landis remembers, with special session after special session, cutting the budget in the middle of the year, hurting programs, hurting people. And, and so again we've seen the impact of not looking farther into the future. So I'm asking all of us, I know the effort here is to be nice and to go ahead and advance the bill off of General File. I'm not going to support the effort to advance the bill. I see a three train crash coming between the effort to cut the income tax, the effort to provide for a decent budget as the Appropriations Committee has submitted, and to provide for decent state aid to make up for the losses of revenue to our schools. And I think the ultimate thing we have to think long term about here is our schools and our overall standing as a state that cares about people. Our health and human services have been cut tremendously. As a result of that we have had some savings, and that's reflected in some of the ability to provide for this income tax cut. We can't lose sight of the fact that we're last in the country in community-based mental health funding. We can't lose sight of the fact that we have over 1,000 mentally retarded individuals waiting for services, and now we're going to cut back, Senator Tyson and Senator Bohlke and across this state, regional centers because we have to come up with the money. We are looking at major cuts and continuing to have major cuts in health and human services. And our schools are going to feel the impact of 1114 in a way that we can't even know fully at this point in time. Those are significant cuts. I think there's some kids out here that'd
