together?

SENATOR JENSEN: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. So, four of them are "Repelicans", right? Well, you call them something else. But four of them are not Democrats, right?

SENATOR JENSEN: That is correct.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: To what party does the President belong?

SENATOR JENSEN: I believe he's a Democrat. (Laugh.)

SENATOR CHAMBERS: When the election took place, which state...which...which party did this state overwhelmingly vote for?

SENATOR JENSEN: It was the Republicans.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And you think a Democrat is going to listen to a "Repelican" state who's got "Repelican" representatives there, fighting him tooth and nail on everything he does, who wanted to impeach him and throw him out of office, and now from the pinhead Legislature of a state like that he's going to say, oh, I got a resolution from Nebraska, I'm going to keep my hands off the money. You really believe that?

SENATOR JENSEN: He represents Nebraska, as he does all states.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: No, that's not what I asked you. Do you believe when this, if this gets to his desk, they will take...are you going to send an Admiralship in the Nebraska Navy with it, to draw attention to it and distinguish it from the others of this kind?

SENATOR JENSEN: It might be a kind thing for us to do.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: How much impact do you think this will have on the President, if he sees it?

SENATOR JENSEN: On the President, I don't know that it will
