March 12, 1999 LR 38

came people didn't even know what I was there for. I had come to take the final exam. To my knowledge, Creighton was probably the only university where you had to take comprehensive exams before you could graduate, both written and oral, and people were so sure I was going to flunk. But university worked for me despite what the bell curve says about my inferiority. University work at Creighton University was very easy for me. I made a mistake when I went to that university. It was a Jesuit school. I thought everybody there was honest. I bought all of the books that a freshman would buy. I studied in the library and left my books there; came back, they had been stolen. I never bought another textbook while I was at Creighton. I went to the library and I did my reading there, and as it turned out, I always read more than was required in any class that I took, so I had no problem. I had a priest named Paul Smith (phonetic), who allowed me to sleep in his English class, and when they were discussing an issue, he'd tell somebody, wake Chambers up. He'd wake me...they'd wake me up and he'd say, Chambers, what's the answer to this question. And I'd say, well, Father Smith, I didn't get the question, would you ask it again? And he'd ask the question and I'd answer it. Now that's to let you know that I have as tight a connection with Creighton as anybody else. I must ask Senator Kiel another question.

SENATOR CROSBY: Senator Kiel.

SENATOR KIEL: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Kiel, if you're congratulating them for having won, are we going to have to confront another resolution extending condolences when they lose?

SENATOR KIEL: No.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: All right. That's all that I have to say, but I must vote against this resolution regardless of how much merit I may feel there is in people recognizing that they won a basketball game.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Any further discussion on LR 38? Seeing none, Senator Kiel, would you like to close on LR 38.
