LB735 would (subject to certain conditions) expressly authorize meetings of community college area boards of governors to be held by means of videoconferencing or teleconferencing. In the event related boards were to hold meetings by such authorized means, community college areas may incur related telecommunications expenses and other costs associated with conditions to be met in order to hold videoconference or teleconference meetings. On the other hand, videoconference or teleconference meetings may result in reduction of certain expenses (e.g. mileage expense related to board members travel). Related impacts upon community college area expenditures would depend upon the extent to which community college area boards would elect to hold meetings by means of videoconferencing and teleconferencing. As such, related impacts are indeterminate.
