This bill would change provisions relating to placement and commitment of juveniles.

The Supreme Court estimates that this bill could have a General Fund impact on Probation Administration for detention costs, changes to protocols, and the case management system, but any impact cannot be determined at this time.

This bill may increase the population at the youth rehabilitation and treatment centers (YRTC) because current law states that a juvenile under 14 years old shall not be placed at a YRTC, but this bill adds “unless the juvenile poses a significant risk to the physical safety of other persons”.

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) states that there needs to be physical separation of younger youth from older ones for the safety and security of the younger kids. They estimate having to construct new facilities physically apart from the current ones at the YRTC’s, both for boys and girls. HHS notes that recent construction of similar facilities have cost about $12 million.

DHHS is unable to estimate the potential number of youth which the provisions of the bill might address, therefore, they were unable to determine the cost impact.

Explanation of Estimate:

LB 537 allows for a juvenile under the age of 14 to be placed in a youth rehabilitation and treatment center if they pose a significant risk to the physical safety of other persons.

Best practices require a physical separation of younger youth from the older youth due to the safety and security of the younger youth. There would be a significant fiscal impact to the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS). The YRTC's would have to establish a separate building physically apart from the currently occupied buildings for both males and females to accommodate this new population. All meals, recreation, schooling and other programming would have to take place within the designated building to avoid any intermingling. The new facility would then have to be staffed 24 hours per day, seven days per week. Recent facilities that would meet DHHS's needs built by local governments have been approximately $12 million dollars to construct.
