FOLEY: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the George W. Norris Legislative Chamber for the second day of the One Hundred Seventh Legislature, Second [SIC] Session. Our chaplain for today is Senator DeBoer. Please rise.

DeBOER: Oh, holy one, we live in a time of fear. Disease, hunger, discord, hopelessness, and loneliness stalk our world. Remind us that the mode of your being is surprise. We read in history that when everything seemed bleakest, you sent Moses and brought the Israelites out of Egypt. When it was least expected, you sent a prophet with your word. And we read that even death, even death on a cross, was not the final answer. A rich man's son became compassionate. Oh, holy one, make us instruments of your surprise. When anger is expected, help us to forgive. When discord is expected, help us to bring peace. When fear is expected, help us to bring compassion and understanding. The spring comes after the winter, unbidden from us, with no action or agency on our part. But help us to become instruments of your surprise. In the name of the one who was, who is, and always will be, amen.

FOLEY: Thank you, Senator DeBoer. I call to order the second day of the One Hundred Seventh Legislature, First Session. Senators, please record your presence. Roll call. Mr. Clerk, please record.

CLERK: I have a quorum present, Mr. President.

FOLEY: Thank you, Mr. Clerk. Are there any corrections for the Journal?

CLERK: I have no corrections.

FOLEY: Thank you, sir. Are there any messages, reports, or announcements?

CLERK: There are, Mr. President. First of all, the preliminary report, as prepared by the Committee on Committees, receipt is acknowledged. Members, you should have received copies of that via email last night, as well as copies in your mailboxes this morning. Mr. President, communications received during the interim include the following series of gubernatorial appointments from the Governor: to the Accountability and Disclosure Commission; to the Arts Council; Beginning Farmer Board; Board of Educational Lands and Funds; the Board of Parole; Child Abuse Prevention Fund Board; the Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing; the Commission for Postsecondary Education; Crimes [SIC] Victim's Reparations Committee; the director of the Nebraska Department of Natural Resources; the director of the Nebraska Department of Banking and Finance; the Director of the Department of Health and Human Services Division of Developmental Disabilities; Nebraska Education Telecommunications Commission; the Nebraska Environmental Trust Board; the Environmental Trust Board; Ethanol Board; the Nebraska Games [SIC] and Parks Commission; the Investment Council; the Information Technology Commission; the Motor Vehicle Industry Licensing Board; Natural Resources Commission; several appointments to Power Review Board; State Board of Health; State Electrical Board; State Highway Commission; the State Personnel Board. Those are all gubernatorial appointments that will be referred to Reference [INAUDIBLE] referral to standing committee for confirmation hearing. Attorney General Opinions, Senator Howard and Brandt, and an acknowledgment, Mr. President, of receipt of the disposition of interim study by the various standing committees of the Legislature. That's all that I have at this time, Mr. President.

FOLEY: Thank you, Mr. Clerk. Members, I'm aware that we do have some members requesting points of personal privilege. But before we get to those, we'll take up the adoption of temporary rules. Speaker Hilgers, you're recognized.

HILGERS: Thank-- thank you, Mr. President. Good morning, colleagues. I move that the rules, as now in our possession, be adopted until such time as the permanent rules are adopted pursuant to Rule 2, Section 1, provided that the temporary rules shall not continue after the 12th legislative day.

FOLEY: Thank you, Speaker Hilgers. Seeing no discussion, the question is, shall we adopt temporary rules pursuant to the motion of Speaker Hilgers? Those in favor say aye; those opposed say nay. The motion is adopted. Senator Blood, for what purpose do you rise?

BLOOD: Point of privilege, Mr. President.

FOLEY: Please proceed.

BLOOD: Thank you, Mr. President. Fellow Senators, friends all, like most of us in this Chamber yesterday, there was a day that we will and should never, ever forget. While many of us were being sworn in, giving speeches, some sincere and some, frankly, posturing, our democracy was being attacked. And regardless of what you believe when it comes to policy or when it comes to politics, yesterday was a travesty in our nation's capital. And I want you to remember these numbers: 1 death from bloodshed, 2 pipe bomb-- bombs and 1 Molotov cocktail, 4 others dead, 14 law enforcement officers injured, and 49 senators-- can I have the gavel, please-- 49 senators who can lead by example and quit being complicit in partisan politics, 49 senators who can stop shenanigans, like reading Dr. Seuss on the floor instead of productive debate, 49 senators who cannot pretend that extended debate where people read from Wikipedia pages is going to change anything. I stand here today and I challenge all of you to stay on the floor, participate in the process, and to offer educated, informed views on our bills and not some ridiculous us-versus-them rhetoric that makes us even more polarized and, frankly, complicit in tearing apart the obviously fragile fabric that holds our nation and state together. And so as we move forward, what can or will we do as a body in the next two years? Will we honor democracy by protecting the rights of Nebraska voters or try to stifle the black vote by pushing forward winner-takes-all? Will we remember that there are Nebraskans who need our help and need us to take action or will we pigeonhole these initiatives by categorizing those who need help as opportunists or too lazy to work? Where will you go with your messaging? How will you prevent what happened yesterday in D.C. from happening here in Nebraska? We can remember that we must listen first, listen first to truly understand that we don't need to always agree, but we do need to always hear where the other person is coming from. We owe them that opportunity because it isn't us versus them. We are Nebraska senators, we are Nebraska's legislative body, and we must lead by example and show our constituents that we understand the importance of protecting not only their rights but our democracy. With that, I want to say that I respect and appreciate all of you, regardless of who you are or where you come from, and that there is power in consensus and power in working together for the greater good of all Nebraskans. And again, I say that we must never, ever forget what happened yesterday, because yesterday should not only be seen as an attack on our democracy, but should also be seen as a foundation that we can use as a springboard for the greater good of our own state. With that, I thank you, friends all. I look forward to a productive year. Thank you, Mr. President.

FOLEY: Thank you, Senator Blood. Senator Hunt, for what purpose do you rise?

HUNT: Point of personal privilege.

FOLEY: Please proceed.

HUNT: Thank you, Mr. Lieutenant Governor and members of the Legislature. I want to explain to freshmen in the body and people watching why I'm taking a point of personal privilege. I don't like to use points of personal privilege to speak on-- on matters, especially when they're political or when they're, you know, current event-type of things. But when you look at the agenda today, we have a motion to adopt the temporary rules. That's a debatable motion. I could have put an amendment on it and done something, but I really didn't want to open that can of worms. I just wanted us to get through the rules and-- and get on to the next thing. But there's nothing else on the agenda that I could put my light on and take five minutes on or bring up for debate. And so for that purpose, today I'm making a point of personal privilege. And this isn't something I'm in the habit of and I don't think that this is like a great best practice, but I wanted to explain why I'm taking the time. I want to talk also about the events that happened yesterday in Washington, D.C., because I'm-- I'm so grateful that Senator Blood spoke up about this and all of us should be concerned about this and somebody needs to say something about this really unprecedented attack on our Capitol, on the building itself, on the institution it represents, and on our democracy. And I don't have any inspirational or soaring or moving things to say about how we're above this and we're going to overcome this and this isn't who we are, but it has to be said because we have to acknowledge the significance for our country of what happened. And I've had many people contact me on social media or over the phone or via email to ask for my thoughts or what's happening, are we safe here in the Capitol? And I'm sure many of you have gotten similar contacts from your constituents as well. What's happening is a fundamental threat to our democratic system that regular people, who aren't elected politicians, who aren't rich, who aren't powerful, depend on so that they don't have their rights crushed. And they depend on the people who are our lawmakers, the people here in our Chamber, the people in Washington, D.C., to protect those rights. And it really concerns me when the people who have the power to do something about it kind of roll over and they say, sure, these are just protesters, come on in. We were picking our leadership yesterday in Committee on Committees, and we just start to get little snippets of news coming in about people storming the Capitol in Washington, D.C. And after we adjourned for the day here, I went into Committee on Committees to work on, you know, putting people in their committees. And we're kind of sequestered in this room and we're just getting snippets of information coming in about a woman was shot and killed; domestic terrorists took over Nancy Pelosi's office and stole things, personal items belonging to her staff and to the people of this country as trophies; they found bombs; they took over the Senate Chamber and took the presiding officer's seat; they took selfies with law enforcement; New York and Virginia sent National Guard troops; and the President openly condoned, encouraged, and supported this from Twitter. How is he going to have the nuclear codes but he's banned from Twitter? He's banned from Facebook now, but he's the one in charge of our country. How does that sit right with any of you? How do we have the greatest military defense budget in the world and all these people can just run up on the Capitol and go inside? How do we have state security when something like that can happen? What do we do with that? And how is it these individuals who are acting as domestic terrorists, because that's what they are, how can they get away with this without heavy law enforcement intervention when throughout the summer in cities, including Omaha, Nebraska, my city, peaceful protesters were tear-gassed and had their eyes shot and lost their vision because of rubber bullets fired by police officers for simply marching in the street. You see the images of the people in the Capitol protesting, coming into the chamber, taking things from people's offices. And then after they all leave, you see the Capitol's staff cleaning up after them. I have to say that this is something that we all should have known was coming. Our outgoing President blatantly issued the instructions for the insurrection and refused to denounce white supremacy on national television and told the Proud Boys to stand back and stand by. So what do we do with that? Well, we continue our work as best as we can, because we have to. But after yesterday's meeting in our Committee on Committees, I already see that we have to be just as wary in Nebraska of the erosion of our democracy, whether that takes the form of voter ID or legislation to restrict vote-by-mail or protecting our Electoral College split in Nebraska. The challenge is before us here, too, in Nebraska, and it's the flames of division that are just fanned by the promotion of these conspiracy theories and the mistrust of each other. Another thing I think about is the irony of this guy who wanted to be the law-and-order President and how he's going out this way, with complete lawlessness, with tear gas, with the National Guard having to be called in, with Twitter suspending his account because he won't stop inciting violence. Part of what happened in D.C. is the responsibility of President Trump for creating the environment and the mood among his supporters to commit this violence. But part of the responsibility is also with the people who spread these stories of the hoaxes and the myths about the validity of the election that continues to be, you know, brought up to this day of was it a fair election. Yes, it's been proven by every single state that it was fair. The electors have certified it's all fine. Joe Biden is the President. He's going to be the President. And these are the same people who attacked Barack Obama with the "birtherism," saying he was from Kenya or he's Muslim, and the same people who continue to post racist and hateful things on Facebook about the Obama family, and then they come and show up here in our Government Committee and try to get appointed on boards and committees, on commissions. It's pervasive. It's rooted in years of resentment and it's not rooted in fact or reality. So who do you think will be held accountable for what happened yesterday? Anyone? Are there going to be consequences of any kind? All I can think of here is if there aren't severe consequences for the people who did this in the Capitol yesterday, and not just for them but for the officers who aided and abetted them, for the politicians who incited it, we will see this happen every time there's a political outcome that we don't like. I listened carefully to what Speaker Hilgers said yesterday about working together and looking past our political differences and actually listening to one another, and he was right to point out the uniqueness of this body and how each of us has a responsibility for maintaining it. In this Nebraska Legislature, we're working from a proven foundation. The people who were here before term limits set us up right. They set us up well with a really strong system. We have the transition of power, yesterday, the work we did in Committee on Committees, that today we're able to introduce whatever bills we want, on whatever topic we want, and we know that all of them--

FOLEY: One minute.

HUNT: --are going to get a hearing. Other states don't have that. So am I optimistic about protecting our elections and democratic institutions in Nebraska? I don't know. I don't think I'm optimistic, but I'm definitely determined. The foundation is there and it's been laid out by our predecessors for us, and it's incumbent upon all of us now to take it seriously and protect it. What does give me optimism is seeing how Nebraskans are activated, seeing how Nebraskans are watching us, they're watching their city councils, they're watching their school boards. And this is all for them. Nebraskans, this is all for you, what we're doing here. As Benjamin Franklin said, it's a republic if you can keep it. This is our democracy and our institution if we can keep it, and we have to improve it, not just for your party but for everybody. Thank you, Mr. President.

FOLEY: Thank you, Senator Hunt. Mr. Clerk, you're recognized for an announcement.
