

HILGERS: Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the George W. Norris Legislative Chamber for the second day of the One Hundred Seventh Legislature, Second Session. Our chaplain for today is Senator DeBoer. Please rise.

DeBOER: Colleagues, today marks the festival of Epiphany in the western Christian church liturgical calendar, the day which celebrates the Matthew 2 visit of the magi to Jesus following a star. Please join me in prayer. Aba, father, God, today we ask for the wisdom of the magi. Grant us the wisdom of science like the magi who were able to study the stars to find Jesus. Grant us the wisdom of inspiration that helped them understand the star would lead them to a new kind of king. Grant us the courage of wisdom that told them not to do the politically expedient thing, but the right thing, as they defied King Herod's orders to find the babe and return to him. Grant us the wisdom of a generous heart, which compelled them to bring expensive gifts to a child born into a manger to a-- nobody powerful in and out of the way place. As we embark on this new year, grant peace and mercy to all in this building and give these 49 senators the wisdom of your magi to put what is right above all else. In the name of the creator of all the stars, the one who was heralded by the stars and the one who reminds us each year of that sacred story of God with us, amen.

HILGERS: Thank you, Senator DeBoer. Senator Lowe, you're recognized for the Pledge of Allegiance.

LOWE: Please join me in the Pledge of Allegiance.

HILGERS: Thank you, Senator Lowe. I call to order the second day of the One Hundred Seventh Legislature, Second Session. Senators, please record your presence. Roll call.

LINDSTROM: Mr. Clerk, please record.

CLERK: I have a quorum present, Mr. President.

LINDSTROM: Thank you, Mr. Clerk. Are there any corrections for the Journal?

CLERK: I have no corrections.

LINDSTROM: Thank you. Are there messages, reports or announcements?

CLERK: Mr. President, acknowledgment of reports from the various standing committees regarding, regarding interim study resolutions and results from those. Priority bill designations: Senator Clements, LB310; Senator Brewer, LB773; Senator Linehan, LB364 That's all that I have, Mr. President.

LINDSTROM: Thank you, Mr. Clerk. Speaker Hilgers for an announcement.

HILGERS: Thank you, Mr. President. Good morning, colleagues. As I previewed yesterday, I wanted to give everyone a little bit of an update on a couple of different topics here this morning. I'm going to start with a memo that's going to be-- is, is in the process of being handed out, which is an update on the floor procedures for this session. You will find in that memo that almost everything, including the filibuster rule, is identical to what we did last year. So the filibuster rule, as you recall, we had 8-4-2. That worked very well last year. There are, there are, however, two slight modifications I want to give the body notice of now. They're not material, but they're important to give everyone notice. The first one, it relates to Final Reading time limits. So if you recall, it was 8-4-2, but I had incorporated a rule last year in which if there wasn't a motion for cloture that had been adopted on a particular bill at General File or Select File, then the, the time limit on Final Reading was not two hours, it was four hours. And the reason I had done that was to avoid any kind of sandbagging on Final Reading to make sure if there was a real substantive debate on a particular issue, that we would have enough time to debate that issue. That being said, in this session, we don't have a lot of time. And we actually didn't really see that come up last year and so we are-- the first modification is we're going to do 8-4-2 and it will be two hours, regardless of whether there had been a motion for cloture successfully adopted on either of the prior two stages of debate, with the, with the exception that if there is a last-second substantive filibuster that really feels like a sandbag, we will go to four hours. But the default should be two. We really haven't seen that in my time in the Legislature, so I actually am not concerned about that, but I want to be very crystal clear in the notice that I'm providing the body. So that's change number one. Change number two is a-- is to the time limits for A bills. So in my time in the Legislature, we have never really specially treated A bills. We have had eight hours [INAUDIBLE] or three hours on the prior-- before I was Speaker on a particular underlying bill and then we would also have the same amount of time on an A bill. When we're dealing with this session and the limited amount of time that we have, we have, after today, only 58 days, we have over 100 priority bills that we anticipate coming, plus work that we have left over from last year, plus the budget bills that we know are coming. We simply do not have the time to have eight hours on General File for a, for a bill and then an additional eight hours on the A bill. So we will not change the rule for the underlying, underlying bill, the, the substantive bill, it will be 8-4-2 as I mentioned, but A bills will be just one hour, with the exception if it is a-- if it actually is a somewhat complicated A bill, we will do two hours. But in my experience in the Legislature, there has not been an A bill that I can recall that on the substance ever required more than an hour to talk through. That hopefully will save us a little bit of time as we go into next-- into this session. So you can look at those-- that memo. It lays it all out. In addition to the four procedures, that memo also includes a little bit about what we have got coming up this year. And as I just mentioned, we know we have some really big issues coming: the budget, of course. We have two budgets that will be coming we think in February, March, that timeframe. That's going to take up a lot of time. And we have a number of other of your priorities that we want-- my job is to ensure that we get as many of those heard as we possibly can. It's going to take a lot of coordination between the chairs, my office and you to make sure we're strategically taking advantage of every single day that we have a floor debate here in the Legislature. Otherwise, there's a high likelihood we will not get through all the priority bills this year. There simply is not enough time for us to be able to do that unless we're all working together. As we approach debate this year-- and by the way, next week, floor debate, where we have all-day floor debate next week, we're going to get started right away. Here-- and this is in the memo, but it's important and I'm-- emphasize. My priority in terms of scheduling bills will be as follows: first, it will be 2022 priority bills. I already have had four priority bills designated for '22, 2022 priority bills. A few of those are going to be debated next week and I'm going to talk about that in a second. That's number one. Number two is 2021 carryover priority bills. So those are not bills that were designated as priorities and then didn't have a motion for cloture adopted or failed on General File or the like. Those are bills that you may remember by the, the-- at request of the introducer were held over. There are a number of those bills. They're at the end of the memo that I've handed out. Please take a close look at those. Those are my next priority. And then the third is worksheet order. So those are the priority-- those are the orders I will be scheduling things; 2022 priorities, 2021 priorities, and then worksheet order. All of that is in the memo. I do want to point out for scheduling as we go into next week, we will be-- so the bills that we're looking at potentially for next week, the second memo, as I sort of go into my second memo, which lays out the entire schedule today and tomorrow, is, is bill reduction. As we go into next week, I want to highlight a couple of things. We last year tried as much as possible and I think with, with a large amount of success to ensure that the body had as much notice in advance of as many bills as we, as we could, especially difficult bills that we thought would draw a filibuster. That worked well last year, in my estimation. We're going to continue to do that. However, this first part of the session, I'm asking for as much flexibility and understanding from your perspective because as we get in and have a number of new priorities designated and as new bills are getting introduced, but they're not through committee process yet, the first week or two are going to be far more in flux than I would like, but it is the reality of the circumstances in front of us. So I'm going to do my best to give you as much notice about the issues that I'm-- that are coming, but we all have to be nimble working together because if I get, as an example, a 2022 priority designation on a bill on General File tomorrow, that goes to the top, top of the line and we may be working on that next week. So I'll give as much advance notice as possible, but at least for these next couple of weeks, it will be more difficult for me to say next Wednesday, we'll be dealing with this issue, next Thursday morning, we'll be dealing with this, this other issue. I will do my very best to do that. How-- I do have, as I mentioned, four bills that have been designated '22 priorities. One of them was just introduced and so it will not come up next week. There are three others that are on General File now that have been designated as priorities. The first one is LR14, which is Senator Halloran's convention of states resolution, the second is LB310, which is Senator Clements' bill relating to inheritance tax and the third-- what number-- Senator-- is Senator Linehan's scholarship tax credit bill. As you know, a bill that failed on General File or any stage of debate in 2021 or this year, in fact, can come back if it is reprioritized. So those are the three. I have a fourth again, as I mentioned, but it was just introduced and so it's not relevant for next week. I don't know precisely what day that those will come up, if they come up next week. I anticipate probably all three of those will be coming up next week. Those are the three bills that I've got. More likely than not, I have to work with Senator Halloran, but I think the convention of states will come up Monday. That's my best projection today. As we go into next week, the schedule is Monday, we start at 11:00. The reason we're starting at 11:00 is at 10:00, we have a really important tutorial on the public comment system. As I've mentioned a couple of times in the mike, we introduced that last year. It was a new system. It was new for the public, it was new for you, it was new for your staff. It actually worked out very well as a new system. We had thousands of comments that came in. We actually had a number of people who found it very valuable. We've made a number of iterations and improvements to that. We're also broadening its use to be the new mechanism for position statements. So we're doing it as a broader, more accessible, accessible system for the public. But we're also really want to ensure-- we've done some things internally on the Uninet that you all and your staff have an opportunity to really utilize that to its fullest degree. So next Monday at 10:00, there will be a tutorial from our IT staff and our new IT director, Jayne Scofield, is going to be sending out an email scheduling that. So please look for that and make sure if you can't make it, that your staff is there. I found the comment system to be incredibly valuable and helpful to get really real-time feedback from the public as we proceed. The schedule next week will be 11 o'clock. As I mentioned, we'll end at 5:00. On Tuesday, we will start at 9:00 and end at 5:00. On Wednesday, we'll start at 9:00 and end at 5:00. And on Thursday, the Governor has the State of the State. We will check in at 9:45 and end no-- his State of the State will be at 10:30-- or 10:00, I'm sorry-- and we will end no later than 1:00. So that's the schedule for next week. The week after that, we will start committee hearings and we'll have half-day debate. We are not doing a full-day committee hearings. I think you all know that, but it's worth again repeating that. Big picture, schedule wise, March 3 is the end of our committee hearings. March 8 is the beginning of full-day debate. March 14, the very next week, we will start late nights. I cannot overemphasize to you how important it is to be strategic about the first half of this session because there is almost no time after committee hearings to get done with all the work that we have to get done, including the budget bills and all the priorities. And I-- if-- there's almost no better example for you to see that in real time than to say we only have one week, only one week of full-day debates before we go to night debate. So the rest of the memo has all my-- all the other deadlines. It has the deadlines for Speaker priority designations requests, for your designation-- your priority, your committee priority designation requests. It also as a tentative deadline for-- I believe it's in there-- on consent calendar. I will do a consent calendar similar to what I did last year, where it's a few-- once we get going, maybe four or five, seven consent calendars Monday morning. We will generally start Mondays, after next week, at 10 o'clock, but that's only for the first couple of months. The back half of the schedule, we're going to be here on the floor as much as we possibly can to get as much work as we possibly can get done. I think those are the primary announcements I have this morning. I will update you if I can tomorrow with a little bit more clarity on next week's schedule, but at least those three bills you should be thinking are very likely to all three of those come up and look at the carryover priorities on the back of the memo that I sent. Please look at those two cal-- those two memos very closely. And at a minimum, please have your staff look through the, the second memo that has all the dates and times because there are a lot of different dates in there, including this-- the judiciary-- State of the Judiciary address from, from the Chief Justice and a number of other scheduling deadlines that I think are really important to an effective session. So I appreciate in advance all of your good work and cooperation and coordination as we strategically approach this session so that we can get as much done as we can for the people of Nebraska. Thank you, Mr. President.
