LB 322 relates to the Nebraska Criminal Code.

The bill expands protections for pharmacists by including them under Nebraska's assault laws. It also updates assault classifications, adjusts penalties, and removes outdated provisions affecting public safety officers, emergency responders, and healthcare workers.

AM767 replaces the entirety of LB322, adding specific clarifications and expansions.

The amendment broadens the definition of "health care professional" to explicitly include all hospital and health clinic employees, rather than limiting it to licensed practitioners. It clarifies the definitions for emergency care providers and pharmacists as originally stated in LB322.

The classifications and penalties for assaults (first, second, and third degree) remain unchanged, but the amendment provides clearer distinctions regarding the roles protected under the statute. Additionally, the amendment retains requirements for healthcare facilities to display signage indicating the penalties for assaults. Lastly, provisions related to assaults involving bodily fluids remain consistent with LB322.

The Supreme Court states that providing judicial education has a minimal fiscal impact.

The Nebraska Department of Correctional Services (NDCS) states that LB 322 could increase the prison population, however at this time that amount is indeterminable.

It is difficult to provide an exact estimate of the fiscal impact at this time, as current data under existing law is not readily accessible. However, to see a substantial increase in state expenditures due to incarceration costs resulting from LB322 and AM767, the number of individuals incarcerated would need to be significant.

Historically, legislation that incrementally expands protected categories has resulted in modest cost increases, unless there's a substantial uptick in enforcement, reporting, prosecution, and convictions.
