paper in your district, in news papers you have of whose died in the district carried in the public notice, I think that it should be mandatory, you simply say whenever it comes to his attention, so you're saying, you're letting him out. If he doesn't read the list of the dead, he can say well it didn't come to my attention. This is sloppy, while let's say that he does, that he shall. Would you say that Senator Whitney? Make it mandatory, we all get lists in the districts of whose passed away.

SPEAKER: Senator Whitney.

SENATOR SYAS: It will be one of his duties to look over these lists, to check.

SENATOR WHITNEY: Senator Syas, I appreciate your comment and I would go along with you, I'm just trying to figure out how this amendment could be amended to do this.

SENATOR SYAS: Well you just say when it comes to his attention, he can say well I didn't see it, I don't know anything about it I didn't check, and then you have nothing at all, but what you've got now, yet Senator Whitney, the county clerk did check he would be purging his list, the one that was lazy or didn't take the time he could just let the thing go on, and the guy is still a voter and he's got a tombstone over his head at the cemetery, you've got a big loop hole in your amendment.

SENATOR SYAS: Well Mr. President, this is better than what we now have, because we have nothing at all now, but it says here it shall be his duty to strike the name of such person from the register whenever it shall come to the attention of the election commissioner or county clerk
