physically. We have, also, or will, I presume, pass public defenders and it's estimated by those county attorneys who ought to know or have some idea that, probably, it will increase their work load anywhere from one to two and three times what it now is. We have other county attorneys up in northwest Nebraska who testified they're a law office of one. That's all there is is the County Attorney, and they have a backlog of cases which they can't hear, and don't hear. They're underpaid and understaffed and for the most part that's not by accident. Now, what I'm trying to say we're building up
