right square in the mouth and look down its throat. Now we, we talk about small family size farms. I think we have the same problem of small family size businesses. They're becoming almost a thing of the past and I don't think it's good for the country. Most of our human resources come from our small business and from our small farms because they get the experience of being the board of directors. They're the head of the firm and they're everything so that's why our large industries in the east and the west pick on our, pick our Nebraskans and our small business people, or our children from small businesses to head up their corporations. At one time we, we had the President of Ford Motor Company, from a little dairy farm south of Columbus in Senator Schmit's district, right close to his home, his neighbor. We had the head of Chrysler Corporation from Alliance, Nebraska, folks who were brought up either on small farms or small businesses. Now this is a resource that we are losing. Are we going to lose in our smaller towns our resources
