outweighed by the potential benefits. In a year's time and you'll probably see more child support collected under this means than any other bill we've put on the books. It may be indirect, it may be using a little unfair leverage, you might say, but I think it will accomplish the job and I think we should go ahead and pass it and give it a chance.

PRESIDENT: We're still debating the motion to indefinitely postpone LB957 on Select File. The Chair recognizes Senator Marsh.

SENATOR MARSH: After that eloquent speech, may I ask Senator DeCamp a question?

PRESIDENT: Senator DeCamp yield to a question?

SENATOR MARSH: If you have two men and they're next door neighbors, each is behind in his child support payments. One owns an automobile and the other one takes a bus, are you treating those two men fairly when you take a drivers license away from one but not from the other?

SENATOR DE CAMP: Well, Shirley, you're setting up a particular hypothetical, now, if we take any law that's passed in this Body, I can create one half dozen or one hundred hypotheticals where it won't work perfect. This is one case. Any kind of suspension, someone could suspend my drivers license, God forbid, and I might have to take the bus or I could use my thumb. The point is that's an alternative that's always available to you but that's no reason to defeat the bill itself here. There's no way you can ever treat those two equally. They're treated equally to the degree that they would both lose their licenses for failure of child support but what they each do after that,...

SENATOR MARSH: One does not have a license, sir, this is why I feel it is unconstitutional because it does not treat two individuals the same way before the law for the same offense. If....

SENATOR DE CAMP: If it were going to be declare unconstitutional, I think every lawyer in this room would agree that wouldn't be the grounds. That particular objection there. But....

PRESIDENT: Chair recognizes Senator Frank Lewis. Then Syas, Proud, Schmit.

SENATOR FRANK LEWIS: Mr. Chairman, as I spoke on the floor last Wednesday about this issue, I think to put it in its correct perspective, those who want to be popular and use this as a device and not try to provide for children, that might be interesting, but in historical review, Senator Schmit was one of the prime movers last year of saying let's make money available for those children who do not have the necessary level of support. And I agree that those who really want to say we're getting tough and not putting any money in could use this as kind of apolitical vehicle to get tough and get the money and not vote for it. But the problem is that last year several of us had voted for the ADC payments were refuted by this group and not voted for it. Senator Schmit was not involved in that group. He supported it. Senator Schmit, along with several other members of this committee, Health and Welfare Committee that voted the bill out, plus I know that Senator Fellman's Judiciary Committee looked at it. And the problem with failure of
