

SENATOR STAHMER: Mr. President and members of the Body. Irrespective of how laudatory Senator Keyes' motives might be, the Supreme Court of the United States just this week struck down a similar proposition saying that it was an invasion of privacy under the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. I think this is unconstitutional. We cannot invade private people's private lives and the Supreme Court has ruled just this week on a similar matter brought by some doctors. I now call the question.

PRESIDENT: What did you say, Senator Stahmer?

SENATOR STAHMER: I now call for the question.

PRESIDENT: Senator Stahmer's called for the question.

SENATOR STAHMER: All right, I withdraw it. Senator Carpenter wants to add some enlightenment.

PRESIDENT: Well, I have to call on names in order here. Senator Frank Lewis.

SENATOR F. LEWIS: Well, Mr. Chairman, this has my curiosity up. I'd like to ask Senator Whitney of the Budget Committee a question. Now the other day when Senator Cavanaugh and I were talking about teacher-student contact and what the University ought to do about it, we suggested at that time it was probably a Regent problem and now suddenly when someone has proposed something else, it's the Regents responsibility and none of our business. And even those things could be directly related because some of the criticisms bestowed here was the fact that people weren't teaching. Now, could you explain the difference to me?

SENATOR WHITNEY: Senator Lewis, did I agree with you on that subject? I think I did, didn't I?

SENATOR F. LEWIS: I didn't remember, that's what I was trying to figure out. Maybe Senator Nore or somebody else from the Budget Committee could give me that bit of information.

SENATOR WHITNEY: I thought I agreed with you on that, Senator Lewis.

PRESIDENT: Senator Nore.

SENATOR NORE: Question. I just would like the floor. Am I in line?

PRESIDENT: Yes, you have the floor.

SENATOR NORE: Mr. President and members. I would like to ask Senator Keyes a question. How he would handle this particular problem in the area of the medical school. Let's say we have a man who is nationally known in open heart surgery. Are you going to be able to pay him enough to put his full time in on this particular job?

SENATOR KEYES: Why, Senator Nore, we're not going to fire the man. We're just going to know if he makes more than $10,000 performing his professional service someplace else. He will record it. It doesn't fire him. It doesn't do anything at all except it lets the Legislature know who is working for our University and how much they are making on jobs away from the University.
