SENATOR STONEY: Senator Landis, I still am having a difficult time in comprehending then. Aren't we attempting to reinstate this stricken language? Should it not be remain stricken with reference to that particular group?

SENATOR LANDIS: Perhaps with respect to that one particular group the language is no longer operative.

SENATOR STONEY: That was my only question.

SENATOR LANDIS: Right. With respect to other groups that continue to exist I think it is important to put the language back in.

SENATOR STONEY: I have no difficulty with that but my only question was the number of Spanish American War veterans that were still living and whether or not they would be in a position to qualify to be included here so that is my question.
