

April 25, 1979

LB 221

they made the decision to lower it from twenty to nineteen. A lot of people don't understand that we did that in two phases and I would like to make that very clear. In '69 we went from twenty one to twenty and in '72 I believe it was from twenty to nineteen. You know we allow people to vote in this state, in this country, when they are nineteen years old. We allow them to marry when they are seventeen. These are very serious things. They are questions of maturity, when it is chronologically mature, when is one mentally mature, when is one socially mature, when is one physically mature and Senator Kelly has talked about all these things, but the key point here is that you are going to say with this bill, you are going to say that chronologically if you are twenty-one years old you are an adult. You are an adult in many other cases prior to that time but for the purposes of drinking in this great state twenty-one is the age limit. What you are basically saying is that the nineteen and twenty year olds in this state who are working, who may have family and children, you know, let's talk about the college student. Let's talk about all these people. You know we are talking about a wide variety of individuals and not all of them are immature. Not all of them are mature. I know people at forty five that are not mature. I know people who abuse alcohol at ninety. They don't do it real well because at that time, but anyway the point is this, that you are making a determination that twenty one will be the age limit. You are discriminating against a whole lot of nineteen and twenty year olds who are most likely and in my experience, very mature and you are doing that because you feel that it is a problem with some and when you really discuss this issue with people who are concerned about issues, you find out that they say well, it is really not the nineteen and twenty year olds who are abusing alcohol. It is because they sell to the seventeen and eighteen and sixteen year olds and then when you ask those people how that happens they say, well, there is a whole lot of them in high school, nineteen year olds. That is not true. We ought to allow some exemptions. This military exemption I think is a legitimate exemption. There are a whole lot of other legitimate exemptions. You can't tell the people of this state that you are going to basically disenfranchise, franchise means the vote, but I mean you are going to take away rights, legitimate rights. You are going to make criminals out of a whole lot of nineteen and twenty year olds who are mature because a