fund instead of some places he put $5,000,000 and he could have done some good. He is not sure about gasohol. Well, Senator Dworak, neither are a lot of other people, principally the major petroleum companies who said eight years ago it wouldn't work. You refer to the sterling leadership here in Nebraska in a somewhat sarcastic tone of voice. Let me remind you, Senator Dworak, that such as is that leadership, it is here in Nebraska and when you start from scratch I think we have come a long way. We have disproven every single technical objection the petroleum companies voiced against alcohol as a source of energy, every single one of them. Now you talk economics. I don't know...you ought to have egg on your face when you stand here and talk about the economics of using gasohol when gasoline before taxes, went from twenty cents a gallon to seventy cents a gallon. You have got to have sawdust for brains, young man, or else you are not being very realistic and before you get out of here today the price of gasoline will go up again and before this session adjourns it will go up another nickel a gallon and that is only three days away and I ask you, what do you think you are going to do? Go home and tell the people you voted for conservation. Well, Senator Marsh and Senator Dworak, I happen to know what those diesel engines burn an hour. There won't be any diesel engines running out there building ponds. They have shut them off in my area. It is not necessary for the production of food. You talk about corn going to four dollars a bushel? Let me tell you, Senator Dworak, if corn on the December futures goes to four dollars a bushel, you better lay in a wagon load for corn bread because you are going to need it for food because it could well happen.

SENATOR NICHOL: One minute.

SENATOR SCHMIT: If you can't run these engines, there won't be much corn next year. My good friend and neighbor who can't feed his cattle tomorrow morning because he is out of diesel fuel is going to have to burn something. I don't like to get my temper up but after you have been ridiculed for eight years and you have been proven right each succeeding year and you have some one come along and say, well we are not sure yet, let's not put water second, well let me tell you this. We better take care of day to day needs before you take care of long-range needs or you won't be here to worry about the long-range. Now you can vote the amendment down if you wish. I have personally been vindicated by all the effort I have made
