LB 306

I can make this property be sold out from under you and these kids so you better do what I tell you to or I will go down here and I will get this loan. She says, well I will go down and tell him not to let you have the loan. Then he will say what Senator Landis said. You cannot interfere with my right to get a loan when I myself am credit worthy and it is not necessary that I have your signature on this note. I will still make you liable. I will not pay this loan and when I die they are going to sell that property and put you off of it and if you think Mr. Brandt and his cronies won't do that, ask why they got the bill that allows them to do it in the first place. This bill ought to be killed and bankers by exercise of ordinary prudence can take care of any situation that would arise that this bill pretends to deal with but really doesn't.
