

March 5, 1980

LB 605

the law of the jungle, I think I might would rather deal with that than the kind of law which exists in America where people can wear bed sheets and blow up a church on Sunday where three little black girls are trying to learn how to be Christians and they get blown into eternity, or people can be marching peacefully down the street and because they happen to wear the label of communists they can be shot down in broad daylight in the United States of America with laws like these on the books. The kind of law and the kind of law enforcement that I am opposed to is that which is selective, discriminatory and lawless by its application. Now I hope when Senator Kahle made his remarks about where I come from, then referring to Africa, he was not trying to disparage that beautiful, rich continent, because Africa is a wonderful place. It is a wonderful place to be from and it is a wonderful place to go to. It is a terrible thing though to be a descendant of those who come from that continent and be in a country like this one where such subtle comments are made on the floor of the Legislature, then find other situations where senators can become outraged and disapprove of my conduct when I express an angry reaction to these kinds of things. But now to bring everything into perspective, I have said before that I am outnumbered on this floor, Senator Kahle, and in certain issues that is the case. But on this particular bill I am going to watch the majority of the legislators if they vote against my kill motion and vote to pass this bill. I am going to watch them simply say, the Legislature has made disturbing the peace a crime. This bill simply says, and we mean it. It is a worthless piece of nothingness. My kill motion offers an opportunity to dispatch it and save some time. If you choose not to kill the bill, I am not going to comment on it any more, Senator Haberman, when you make the motion to advance or anything else. I have had my fun on it for this morning, and I will continue to have fun on it in the future.

SPEAKER MARVEL: Senator DeCamp. We are on the kill motion.

SENATOR DeCAMP: Well, Mr. President, I was not trying to be frivolous. I was trying to make a point before and I think it might have been made a little bit. But I would have a question of Senator Haberman, or Senator Johnson, Senator Hoagland, any expert in the place, any one of the other forty-eight senators, and the question is simply this, if anybody in the whole room, anybody in the whole big room here can tell me one thing different the bill in its present form does, then exactly what existing law is, then I guess I will say, by golly, we better pass this bill as long as