will cost them money. What is the...Senator Beutler asked a similar question and I guess I didn't quite get the answer right in my mind.

SENATOR LEWIS: Well in terms of trying to interpret what your outflow of money is, obviously there is much more money in the fund than necessary for retirement because of this start up time. The longer your employees live and the longer they draw the benefits, the more expensive it is. The argument we make of course is because of the earlier age of demise of firemen and policemen that makes that actuarially different and they are picking it up and I don't think the city has figured that kind of concept into their actuarial figures. They are figuring at a maximum level with maximum population which I think makes considerable amount of difference.

SENATOR RUMERY: Their figures then are largely start up funds? Is this right? Until the employees get money built into the fund?

SENATOR LEWIS: Well the dollars are already there and of course entering firemen now or an entering policeman now, he is thirty-five or twenty-five years away from retirement and as that funds builds up that is a constant fund that belongs to them and if someone expires, then that is part of the bulk fund from which you draw from the others and the actuarial figures that we use are very different even in the state system for state patrol versus public school teachers, although that is getting to be a little closer to the same age of expiration.

SENATOR RUMERY: Thank you, Senator. Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR CLARK: Senator Koch.

SENATOR KOCH: Mr. Chairman, I move the previous question.

SENATOR CLARK: The question has been called for. Do I see five hands? The question before the House is cease debate. All those in favor vote aye, all those opposed vote nay. Record the vote.

CLERK: 26 ayes, 2 nays to cease debate, Mr. President.

SENATOR CLARK: Senator Lewis, do you wish to close?

SENATOR LEWIS: One thing, again, the information I provided to you was provided to me in advance. I reverified the information outside with those groups that I mentioned to you.
