

Legislature meets. It deals with it directly in the Constitution, right on section. I am simply saying I prefer a different or a variable time on when they meet as opposed to what Senator Wesely says they should meet. But in terms of germaneness, our germaneness rule is going to mean nothing if something as on-point as this isn't germane. Now it may be something he disagrees with, and I understand that, maybe total disagreement, but germaneness...it's sitting right there. I mean it is right there exactly the same. What if I had made an amendment or a motion to change the date to the fourth Tuesday or the third Tuesday or the seventh Tuesday? That would be the same thing. It is just changing the times we meet, and that is what I'm doing, and that is...

SPEAKER NICHOL: Excuse me, Senator DeCamp, were you going to make a motion to overrule the Chair?

SENATOR DECAMP: Well, I hate to do that, but...

SPEAKER NICHOL: Well, that is what would be necessary if you wish to talk about it, though.

SENATOR DECAMP: I was kind of hoping to convince the Chair into changing his mind.

SPEAKER NICHOL: I heard you the first time.

SENATOR DECAMP: I'd make a motion to overrule the Chair. I think we ought to vote on this.

SPEAKER NICHOL: All right, now you can talk.

SENATOR DECAMP: Okay. It really is germane. Now you may not like it, but at least it is germane.

SPEAKER NICHOL: Now it's debatable. I have several lights on that were going to talk about the bill, apparently. Let me see the hands of those that wish to speak on the germaneness part. Okay, just hold them up until we get your hands, please. All right. Senator Wesely, first.

SENATOR WESELY: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, members, this morning I got up and I said...I got down on my knees and I prayed. I said, Lord, today I'd like an easy one, I'd like a bill that came up on the floor and wasn't too
