

Senator DeCamp.

SENATOR DECAMP: Okay, this is just for lying when you fill out the form. If you then went around and stole...

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Haberman, Senator Haberman, if you have questions, ask questions. This is not to argue.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Senator DeCamp, when you lie when you fill out the form, isn't that the guts of your whole amendment, your whole deal?

SENATOR DECAMP: Yes, that...

SENATOR HABERMAN: All right.

SENATOR DECAMP: But, but wait, wait, wait. The other portion is if you really did lie and stole the grain, then you are guilty of all those other crimes, stealing, and...and they have all kinds of separate felony provisions themselves.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Well, I'm going to try an amendment, Senator DeCamp, and see what happens. Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Vickers. Senator Vickers, before you begin, if I may, I would certainly like to welcome to the Legislature Senator Hoagland's mother, Mrs. Lawrence Hoagland, who is under the south balcony, and I understand also 17 ladies who are members of the Book Club, which was established back in 1990 (sic). Perhaps you'd all stand so we could welcome you to the Legislature. And also, if I may, guests of Senator Harris, Mrs. John T. Harris and Mary Sue Harris from McCook and Lincoln respectively, under the north balcony. Welcome to the Legislature. Senator Vickers.

SENATOR VICKERS: Mr. President, members, I wonder if Senator DeCamp would respond to some questions, please. Senator DeCamp, on the amendment, on page 1585, line 24, that would be in the bill, as I understand it, page 2, line 23. You changed the word "shall" to "may". In other words, it says that a buyer, instead of shall require, now it says may require. Could you tell me the reason for giving them the discretion if we are going to give them that
