

SENATOR DECAMP: Which one is my right one? Let me ask are they all the same thing?

CLERK: You have two.

SENATOR DECAMP: I have two.

CLERK: Yes.

SENATOR DECAMP: Let me quickly find out which one I want. Okay, the five percent to four and a half percent, which is...

SPEAKER NICHOL: Senator DeCamp.

SENATOR DECAMP: I'm just finding out, want to make sure I have the right on.

SPEAKER NICHOL: Oh, all right.

SENATOR DECAMP: Let me ask a question. Is Vard going to oppose this? Yes, okay. Well, let me go ahead, Mr. President.

CLERK: Which one are you on?

SENATOR DECAMP: I think we want the second one.

CLERK: You going to withdraw the first then, Senator?

SENATOR DECAMP: I think so, but I'm not just absolutely sure. I need to look at them real quick. You got them both there?

CLERK: Yes. I usually do, Senator. Senator DeCamp's amendment, Mr. President, is on page 2009 of the Journal.

SENATOR DECAMP: Yes, 2008 and 2009. Okay. Mr. President, the amendments, so you understand, is a result of that "task force study" of the whole parimutuel situation, the tax. The amendment itself was unanimously agreed to, at least at that time, by all members of that task force which included such people as Mr. Dougherty with Valmont, Senator Miller, I think Senator Conway was there, myself, a variety of individuals, John Cavanaugh, is a far cry from what the track sought, but it is some significant assistance to the
