

somebody in the back seat drinking, you will very likely catch that individual giving it to the driver. You know that. And he will be drinking. And if we don't have "or possess", then that can go on.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Well, then why would you allow it to be in the back seat in the first place if they are very likely to give it to the driver?

SENATOR SIECK: That is what I am trying to correct.

SENATOR HIGGINS: That is what I am trying to find out.

SENATOR SIECK: That's what I am trying to correct.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Does your amendment to the amendment...

SENATOR SIECK: That's what the amendment does.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Your amendment to the amendment says...

SENATOR SIECK: That's what it does.

SENATOR HIGGINS: ...that if anybody is drinking in any vehicle whether they are driving or not, they are going to get ticketed for it.

SENATOR SIECK: Right. That's what it says.

SENATOR HIGGINS: And the policeman or the sheriff or the highway patrol that stops them, they are going to know which ones have been drinking tomato juice and beer mixed, or vodka and grapefruit juice?

SPEAKER NICHOL: One minute.

SENATOR SIECK: If they have got it in their possession.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Well, if there is six of us sitting in the back end of that recreational vehicle, or if it is in the back of a hatchback where there is no trunk and the driver could very easily reach back in a hatchback car, because you know they don't have a trunk...

SENATOR SIECK: Okay, then...
