

had in the way of expenses? In other words, what guideline do they have? They could charge a penny. So what would you have in mind as an admission fee?

SENATOR HABERMAN: A dollar for adults and fifty cents for children.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Haberman, not being facetious, when was the last time you went through a museum?

SENATOR HABERMAN: I have never been there.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So you wouldn't pay a dollar certainly to go if you wouldn't go free.

SENATOR HABERMAN: I think I would be more inclined to spend a dollar than if I could go free because it would mean more to me.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: You mean something that you can get for nothing would mean more to you if somebody made you pay a dollar for it?

SENATOR HABERMAN: There isn't anything that is free in this world, Senator Chambers. You pay for it one way or the other.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: No, that's not...the question that I asked you is that you feel that something which you can get for free will be worth more to you if you could pay a dollar for it?

SENATOR HABERMAN: No, it is just the other way around. It would mean more to me if I paid the dollar than if I could get it for free.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, so let me rephrase the question my way, Senator Chambers. Currently you can get into the Museum free. You say it would mean more to you if you had to pay for it?

SENATOR HABERMAN: Yes, because it would be worth more, because there is nothing...such a thing as free, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do farmers spend more money to grow a
