

any of them, but they got a terrible sentence. They had to do so much community service. Now somehow somebody discovered those cheaters and brought them to trial. Didn't do a heck of a lot of good. It didn't give the money back to the state. And because they wore white collars and blue suits and neckties, they never went to jail. They got to do community service. But I defy anybody to tell me that they know of the ADC cheaters and they have never reported them, or the unemployment compensation cheaters and they have reported them. It seems like only the poor cheat, the rest just rig. So I think in order to keep the conversation at an even keel, let's either call those multimillion dollar bid riggers cheaters of the taxpayers...

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR HIGGINS: ...or let's call those ADC alleged cheaters ADC riggers, because where you may be talking about some aid to dependent children, and like I say, I haven't seen many cases of them tried. I haven't seen anybody declare to a judge or to a county prosecutor about it. Let's cut out this ADC cheating and call them what they all call the big boys, the multimillion dollar ones. Let's call them ADC riggers if there are any and I know there are. And I know there is an awful lot of bid rigging going on in other departments that don't concern the Department of Roads. It goes with part of the game. You know it and I know it. But they have got their lobbyists and they have got their friends in high places. They have got the judges that they helped get appointed because they helped such and such a governor get elected. I am going to vote for Senator Chambers' amendment and I am going to ask every one of you other 48 senators here if you know somebody that is actually cheating on ADC other than they said...

PRESIDENT: Your time is expiring.

SENATOR HIGGINS: ...give me their name, I am not chicken, I will report them. Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT: You're welcome, Senator Higgins. Senator Warner, do you wish to speak on the Chambers amendment?

SENATOR WARNER: Only to this extent. Perhaps the discussion has pointed out that the problem that lies with this 2 percent concept, this particular program the bulk of
