

is needed for things to gel. Now the way you make jello, if you're going to use one of the big boxes, is to take two cups of hot water, you pour the jello in it and you stir it until you dissolve it all. Then you pour cold water in and then you put it in the refrigerator. The jello is in the refrigerator. It's gelling and before you know it you're going to have something which...just look around you. See how we've drawn all of the contending parties together? Do you see how we have a discussion now of all of the major actors of what is going to be done and how it's to be done? Didn't I tell you before the conclave under the north balcony that something was going to happen this evening? It's in the process of developing now and maybe a good friend of mine will understand what I meant a minute ago. Sometimes it seems like you are about to lose everything, but sometimes risks have to be taken to make something happen. Sometimes that which appears to be the obstacle is really the catalyst, not a partaker in the reaction, but that which facilitates or stimulates it. Notice? Didn't I tell you the reporters go where the action is? Didn't I tell you nobody is listening to me? But the effect that was desired is being achieved and you ought to thank me for it, all of you. A few minutes ago you were angry. You thought nothing could be done and Senator Nichol said this is silly and we ought to get down to work and do something, but he didn't know what to do. I always know what to do and I'm doing it and now we're going to see if the jello comes forth as jello or if it doesn't have enough time to congeal this evening. But at some point it will come together, a consensus will be reached and there will be 25 votes to do something. After that, I don't know whether I'm going to do this anymore. Look at my good friend, Senator Pappas, just reared back in his chair in his pink shirt and smoking his cigarette, playing like he's not aware of what is going on all around him, but he knows. And, Mr. Chairman, I think that I'll withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT: The Chair was going to make an observation, Senator Chambers, anyway that your motion to bracket this time was to June 2nd, on Sunday, if that made any difference to you. Senator Chambers has withdrawn his motion. What do we have now, Mr. Clerk?

CLERK: Mr. President, the next motion I have is a motion by Senator DeCamp. Senator DeCamp would move to suspend Rule 6, Section 3, Rule 7, Section 3, and vote without
