

determine that is how they walk in the room, whether they walk straight or alert, or how they sign that drivers license request, whether or not their signature is wiggly or so on, which would indicate maybe they were not quite as alert as they should be to drive a license (sic). But this is a problem that we are definitely going to have to address. I don't know how to do it without discriminating between one age or one group or the other. But it is a serious problem.
