

Movement? Civil disobedience. How about the people that go and learn karate and judo even now? I don't know what all of them learn it for. Some of it is for exercise. I am sure some of it is self-defense, self-defense maybe because they believe in some certain thing that they are pushing, such as a march they are going to do and they want to be able to protect themselves if somebody attacks them. Yes, far-reaching, you are going to say. Far-reaching, and that isn't...and here is what you are always going to hear, that isn't what was intended. That isn't in the mind of this beholder. Senator Chizek, it isn't in his mind. Senator Higgins, it is probably not in her mind. Because what they are seeing out there is the bad thing they want to stop, the people that kill babies and bury them, such as in Rulo, but that is not what the bill does, not what the laws we pass do. They are very broad and I think they are dangerous. And I would suggest that we can deal with these problems, not with blanket laws without a lot of knowledge, but rather by learning one heck of a lot more about what is occurring, what the source of those problems are, the specific individuals involved, these kind of things, and treating them with a very rifle-point basis than the shotgun basis. This doesn't work. It hasn't worked in the past and it will not work this time. But what it will do is make it appear that it is working, make it appear that you have addressed a problem and, in fact, simply mask over things that should be treated differently. So I am going to oppose the bill and I will probably support the various amendments...

PRESIDENT: Time is expiring.

SENATOR DECAMP: ...and I would simply suggest that you all seriously read it and think about the history of this country and whether this is the appropriate method to solve problems.

PRESIDENT: The Chair recognizes Senator Hoagland.

SENATOR HOAGLAND: Question.

PRESIDENT: There are other speakers. I will put the question to you. Do I see five hands? I see five hands. I put the question to you, shall the debate now close on the amendment? All those in favor vote aye, opposed vote nay. 25 votes required to close debate. Please record your vote if you wish to vote. The motion is to cease debate on the
