

floor. Without Senator Landis calling it to someone's attention, no one would have even mentioned it. So I support the bill. I will probably have to provide you documentary proof of what I did earlier. It isn't the first time Senator John has taken a bill of mine and created it to his own devices and secured the widespread support of an industry. So I commend him for it and congratulate him. I suggest you vote for the bill.

PRESIDENT: Again on Senator Landis's motion, Senator Warner, did you wish to speak on this motion?

SENATOR WARNER: Mr. President, I have a question.

PRESIDENT: Very well.

SENATOR WARNER: Mr. President, I don't know under what motion I'm operating.

PRESIDENT: You are operating under Senator Landis's motion to return the bill to Select File for specific amendment.

SENATOR WARNER: Which is...strike the enacting clause. I have a question too, because I have been kind of wondering about it. Like what kind of a name would this bank have? It is not an...it is a straight up question, Senator. What kind of a name would this facility have? What is it called? What might it be called?

PRESIDENT: Federal Reserve Bank of the State of Nebraska?

SENATOR WARNER: The thought occurred to me when I began to hear your explanation, because you know first it was...you misspoke on FDIC, and that certainly raised questions, and then...

SENATOR DECAMP: I had in my head certain initials.

SENATOR WARNER: Then you referred to federal reserve, and that began to raise questions in my mind, too, because I tend to think of the federal reserve generating money that isn't there, or at least have the capacity to do it. And I don't think he meant that. Then I got to worrying about what it is going to be called. I just want to make sure that I'm not voting for something that creates something that five years from now I'm going to have to be explaining why I voted for it.

SENATOR DECAMP: Your question specifically was what would it be
