

SENATOR HABERMAN: No.

SENATOR DECAMP: What do you do then?

SENATOR HABERMAN: I'm going to stand here and listen to you, what you have to say, figure out what you are trying to do and then I am going to vote.

SENATOR DECAMP: Okay. Mr. President, the committee amendments, the committee amendments are the thing that reestablish the situation the way it was before the fluke last year in the grain buyer's bill. It...

SPEAKER NICHOL: The competition is gone now, you may proceed.

SENATOR DECAMP: Walt is pretty cagey but the fan was the "cleverist" trick he has done. The old fan trick, yes. Okay. The committee amendments by the Agriculture Committee attempt to correct the problem that was created and, as I say, it puts everything back to where it was and puts the accountants who have been doing these tax returns and are still doing their tax returns of these individual farmers and "grain buyers", not grain warehouses or elevators, puts them back doing exactly what they were before the unfortunate and inadvertent and accidental error of last year. My amendment, my amendment, believe it or not, simply addresses a question that I thought might be raised by Senator Morehead or Senator Haberman and that is they were going to say, well, these guys don't have enough education so my amendment said, okay, require full certified college degrees. So I would think they would be supporting my amendment, if anything, because it makes them stricter. What I want you to do, and I make no secret about that, despite hidden apple tricks or whatever Senator Haberman is talking about, is adopt the committee amendments. I wish Senator Johnson were here to handle them because he knows the issue intimately. He knows the injustice or injustice that was done and I thought he would be here to explain the committee amendments and I hope maybe he will get back before we finally vote on them. But with respect to my amendment, it simply makes it stricter. I could care less whether you adopt it. I suppose...ah, there he is. He can explain the committee amendments good when he comes back then. My amendment simply makes it even stricter, makes it stricter, so if you had any doubts at all, I would think you would support it. I could care less either way. I do want to see the committee amendments adopted because I think that is the fair
