SENATOR HALL: Senator Chambers, I can't speak for Mr. Cherry, as you well know.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, no, I don't know.

SENATOR HALL: Well...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But if you say you can't, I'll take your word for it.

SENATOR HALL: Yeah, I can't.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I didn't know.

SENATOR HALL: And I mean, it would depend. I mean if I were Mr. Cherry and the contract said you can buy the team for three years based on the proceeds of keno, if I were advising Mr. Cherry, I'd say take it, but I don't think that that offer has been made or would be made.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, would you be speaking as a financial adviser or as an advocate of this particular bill when you gave him that advice?

SENATOR HALL: I'd be speaking as someone who has a little bit of an idea how much money keno is going to raise.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, now let me ask you a question about this game itself. You said there are nine, what do you call those things that...?

SENATOR HALL: Innings.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Innings, okay. Now what does an inning consist of?

SENATOR HALL: Inning consists of three outs.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Three outs. Well if there are three of one and one of the other, why don't you call them outings instead of innings since there are more outings, outs than innings?

SENATOR HALL: Good question. I...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you understand this game?
