

class is even gone. So all depreciable property will not be treated the same, and all depreciable property will not be treated the same. I think Senator Kristensen, maybe Senator Hall is right, too, I mean, maybe we need to start talking about the Constitution and what exactly we are going to do to the uniformity clause, how much, in my opinion, this body is willing to bastardize that long held belief that should guide our constitutional thought on our tax policy in the State of Nebraska, maybe that is the time, maybe we do need to go directly to that and talk about that before we talk about LB 1063, because Senator Hefner's amendment, I mean I support it in concept and financially, my only concern is that if we are going to have some attempt, I am trying to be constructive, if you're going to have some attempt to try and treat things the same, you can't adopt Senator Hefner's amendment. You also have to adopt my later amendment to take 775 out because you have got to treat them all the same. So, maybe, we need to wait and see on the Constitution, what we are going to do with the uniformity aspect. Even though we are going to pull personal property out, are we still going to make some small attempt to retain uniformity within the class of personal property? I don't know. That is a question we are going to have to answer. Maybe we do need to go straight to the Constitution and maybe this body has to come to grips with how far we are willing to push totally ignoring and totally eliminating any uniformity whatsoever when it comes to personal property taxation in the State of Nebraska. That is something that concerns me greatly. I have always said and I still argue that I am willing to exempt all personal property and treat them all the same. And that is my greatest, my feeling the greatest flaw with 1063 that it does not do that in its present form. Senator Hefner's amendment will just add onto that. I guess you can adopt it because you are already doing it anyway, but I guess I, at this point in time, probably will not support Senator Hefner's amendment until we've debated the constitutional amendment, and what this body is going to do to the uniformity clause, and if this body has any intent whatsoever to make the uniformity clause still apply to personal property in any way, shape, or form. And if you don't want to, then vote for Senator Hefner's amendment. But if you are going to try and either go to the court or go to the people, and go to the people and say we are pulling personal property out from underneath the uniformity clause and keeping it separate from real, my concern is that really what you want to do is take personal property out from underneath the uniformity clause and make no attempt whatsoever to apply uniformity to the class of
