earlier today there was some talk about the Cash Reserve Fund. I'm thankful now that that was abandoned for a new approach which I understand is some sort of, I don't know if it's corporate surcharge or whatever it is, but my question is, why isn't that all one neat package so the bill can cash flow itself?

SENATOR LANDIS: When you amend the section you want to make sure that it's covered. Secondly, we're in the middle of a filibuster, Senator Moore, and the prospect of additional amendments provide difficulty on the procedure. If we had two hours on 1063 absent the filibuster, that would be a possibility. There's just simply a...there's a difficulty of handling things on the floor in the context that we are now in.

SENATOR MOORE: Why couldn't that be done with one amendment, suspend the rules and do it? I mean, it would be all inclusive and so it, and I'm certainly willing to help you accomplish that so the bill cash flows, but I think, as you "eloquated" very clearly, I am outside the tent so to speak, so it doesn't make any difference what I think, but you obviously prefer not to do it that way. I mean, how long did it take you to draft that amendment, 30 minutes, 10 minutes, I mean, it's a $4 million issue, couldn't we take the time to do it right, Senator Landis?

SENATOR LANDIS: In fact, given the difficulty that, of finding appropriate language on revenue issues between yesterday and today on this issue, so taking some time would not be a bad idea. We are in the middle of a situation which 1063 is in the control of the opponents of the bill and a run of about 15 amendments in opposition to it and the time and the tension and the focus of the body is such that this was the limited time to do that. We might well, if we don't go slowly, have to provide another reconsideration motion down the line as we had to today on this issue if we did not choose well thought out language. We don't have that many opportunities. Basically, you've taken those opportunities away from us, very skillfully I might add, but the amount of time and clearly we're taught by this that it needs a good, careful fine-toothed comb to go through a revenue issue. The context we're in doesn't make that easy to do.

SENATOR MOORE: Well I understand all those things but I still, I guess I'm concerned that the...my assumption was that I'm willing to vote for reconsideration to get the bill in the
